A CHECKLIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND OFFICIAL GAZETTES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and * A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in * A.

Founded as the official organ of the Socialist Labor Party. Following the party schism of July 10, 1899, rival weekly papers were published, each for a time called the People, and having the same numbering. The faction headed by Daniel De Leon was in 1900 recognized by the courts of New York as legally entitled to the party name, and its organ entitled to the name The People; upon the establishment of the Daily People in 1900 the older paper took the name of the Weekly People.

In Hebrew. The paper was published weekly until the end of 1882; semi-weekly from 1883 to June, 1886; and daily from July, 1886. Ceased publication Jan. 30, 1904.

Edited and published by Alexander Zederbaum and Aaron Isaac Goldenblum. The poet Judah Loeb Gordon was a regular contributor during the years 1880-82, assistant editor during the early part of 1883, and joint editor from December, 1885 to the end of August, 1888. The connection of J. L. Gordon with this prominent newspaper constitutes a memorable epoch in the history of Hebrew journalism; whilst the unpleasant relations of the two editors gave rise to a considerable controversial literature. After J. L. Gordon had officially become joint editor, A. I. Goldenblum, whose connection with the paper seems to have been rather nominal, remained joint publisher for less than a year, then his name disappeared entirely until Sept. 2(14), 1893, when he became acting editor, after Zederbaum's death, until the end of that year. J. L. Gordon was succeeded by Judah Loeb Kantor, who remained a non-official associate editor until the end of the winter of 1890. From 1894 to 1904, Leon Rabinovitch, formerly assistant editor, was editor and publisher. Other sub-editors were: Abraham Shalom Friedberg (1883-86) and Moses ha-Cohen Proser of the department of domestic news (1871-95). Reuben Brainin was connected with the office of the paper during the winter of 1888-89.

Abraham Elijah Harkavy's fourteen literary supplements, published during the years 1878-79, bear the title "Meassef niddachim" and contain historical material from inedited manuscripts in the Imperial Public Library of St. Petersburg, announcements of important new books, and bibliographical notes.

In Hebrew. Edited and published by Perez Smolensky. German title: Beobachter.

After no. 8 the editor decided to have two fortnightlies, appearing alternately, instead of one weekly. Ha-Mabbit, as a fortnightly, is to be devoted to matters of general interest, whilst a new paper, named Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael (German title: Israel. Beobachter) is to be devoted solely to matters Jewish. As a matter of form, in compliance with certain requirements of the Austrian press law, A. Wagner is given as "verantwortlicher Redacteur" for Ha-Mabbit and A. Rudoll for Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael. In all there were published seventeen numbers of Ha-Mabbit and nine numbers of Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael.
